Home page exposes the search targets that are collapsed into a dropdown on subsequent pages.

Top values from selected facets are exposed in a hand-crafted kind of way, to give an overview of the content.

"More" pops up the Refine overlay (see later page for details) showing that facet's full list of values.

Clicking/touching either a region or an annotation highlights both elements.

If the annotation associated with the highlighted region is outside the currently visible text area, the anno list auto-scrolls so the annotation is in view.

Annotations should be in basic structured HTML. User can highlight and copy/paste all the visible annotations.

Same interaction as annotations.

For full-page transcriptions, the highlighted area of the image will be the whole folio, and the text on the right will be a single block that may scroll.

Grant mercy sire Adonc commence
 Premierement dame Abstinence
 Sire la vertu premeraine
 La plus grant la plus souveraine
 Que nulz homs motrelz puisse avoir info
 Par science ne par avoir
 C'est de sa langue refrer
 A ce se doit chascun pener
 Qu'ades vault myeulx que l'en se taise
 Que dire parole mauvaise
 Et cil qui volentiers l'escoute
 N'est pas preudoms ne dieu ne doubte
 Sire sur tous aultres pechiez
 De cestuy estes entechiez
 Une truffe pieca deistes
 Dont trop mallement mespreistes

Clicking/touching either a region or an annotation highlights both elements.

Primary difference between translations and annotations is the text layout when there are multiple per folio. Translations collapse the author name/date footer to the side so the text can be read in sequence.

Hover/focus highlights the control; click displays the hidden info (or triggers the action),

Click on Refine button to open the overlay.

Overlay is not modal. It closes when user clicks outside of it, or clicks the Refine button again.

Click on a tab to open that facet's list of values.

"Search list" filters the currently open facet values.

Values are in a single list - long scrolling is likely, but no pagination. (Is this technically possible? infinite scroll?)

Value and Count headers are sortable.

When a facet value is selected, that facet's tab label is bold and a count of the values selected is shown.

The search results, total count, and breadcrumb of selected values update in place without a page refresh. (See EarthWorks and Google Art Project for examples.)

When the user clicks Collect on the menu bar, the "drawer" slides open.

Only annotations are collectible. (Manuscripts are bookmarkable.)

User can click the heart icon on any annotation, or drag it to the "drawer".

When there is more than one item in the drawer, the user can click Compare all, or Save all to...

Save all to... opens a dropdown. User can click an existing list name, or select "New list"

"New list" saves selected items to an auto-named list.

Save to any list closes the Collect slider and shows a flash message. User can click the list title in the message to see the full list.
